All Tired Out

Pale, Thin, Poor Blood, No Energy

These are the symptoms of impure blood, starved blood. Take out the impurities, feed the blood, and health quickly returns.

"I suffered terribly from debility. I had no energy. I was tired in the morning as at night. It did not seem possible for me to keep up. I was thin and pale, and my blood was very poor. I had no appetite. I gradually grew weaker and weaker. When almost completely exhausted I read about

GROCER'S NOTICE.

In accordance with our desire to give our customers the best possible service at the lowest prices, we have decided to discontinue the practice of allowing a discount of 5 per cent on retail monthly bills, and therefore give notice that on and after the 1st of November, 1904, no discount whatsoever will be allowed on any groceries sold in our stores. All groceries will be sold at net prices, on a basis of spot cash or thirty days' settlement, and there will be no exception made to this rule. Purchasers made in our retail department up to the 1st of November will, of course, be subject to the 5 per cent discount as heretofore.

The discount question has frequently been the cause of disputes and dissatisfaction and we believe this arrangement will improve our relations with our patrons, while it will at the same time enable us to more adequately meet the keen competition prevailing in our line of business, and to give our customers the benefit of the closest prices.

DOWIE BREAKS OUT

ALEXANDER DOWIE.

CHICAGO, Ill., October 16.—There with the old fashioned notions advanced are some things I do not know. Even by the other churches. He especially ridiculed the idea that the soul lies in This statement came from Apostle the grave until the last day. He is John Alexander in his sermon in Shiloh of the opinion that the spirit goes to tabernacle, Zion City, yesterday afternoon.

The great building was crowded, and the apostle would make some announcement to amplify the letter to his people published in the Leaves of Healing Saturday, in which he said that the second coming of Christ was near at hand. But further than the reference to the fact that all things are not known to him, nothing was said about the subject that was engaging all minds.

"There is no such thing as equality among the divine," he said. "Even the Trinity are not equal. Therefore there can be no comparison between myself and the rest of the divine."

His address was mostly about the "Whiskey hereafter, and his ideas of it compared is the devil in solution."

He also made fun of the words in the burial service of one of the churches in which it is said: "Inasmuch as it has pleased our Almighty Father to remove from our midst by laying his afflictive hand upon him."

"Sickness is never from God," declared the apostle "for if sickness comes from God he must keep it in stock, and you don't think he does that, do you?"

The apostle drew a new distinction between a soul and a spirit. A soul, he claims, is the atom of life, and dies. A spirit is the lasting principle and goes at once to God as soon as the body dies.

According to the apostle, "Whiskey hereafter, and his ideas of it compared is the devil in solution."

SEASICKNESS EXPLAINED

That the malady known as seasickness is due to a disturbance of equilibrium is sufficiently evident, although just how this disturbance acts on the organism to produce its results has been a matter of much controversy.

Under the above heading an article is contributed to La Nature (Paris, September 10), by M. R. Bonnin, in which the author, without going too deeply into physiology, explains at some length the purely mechanical factors involved in the question. He reminds us that when a body swings, pendulum-wise, around a fixed point, its speed is variable. It is at rest just as it starts, moves faster and faster up to a maximum and then slows up until it stops just for an instant at the other end of its course. At any given moment it has three forces acting on it: its own weight, which pulls it directly down; the centrifugal force, directed away from the points around which it swings; and its own inertia, which acts in the direction of its motion. The first is of course constant in amount and direction, the second varies with the speed of the body, and the third with its position in its course. The result is that, during its oscillation, the total force acting on the body (sometimes called its "apparent weight") is continually varying both in amount and direction. This is the case on ship-board, where, M. Bonnin reminds us, these variations, as the vessel rolls cause great strains in the structure of the ship, necessitating vast strength in the hull. The same is true of moorings or fastenings, which, though ample to sustain the weight of a gun, for instance, may be snapped if the vessel rolls suddenly. M. Bonnin goes on to say:

"Now replace such a body by a human being. He will be obliged at each instant to make efforts to put himself in balance with his 'apparent weight,' which is all the time changing in amount and direction. Again, his internal organs, suspended in the thorax and the abdominal cavity, will tend to oscillate continually, becoming displaced relatively to each other and pulling on their attachments. At certain movements the organs seem to rise, while at others they appear to grow heavier. Hence an effect of distress which may bring on nausea and is called seasickness when it arises from the motion of a ship. As the nausea results from the oscillations of the organs contained in the thorax and the abdominal cavity, we see why the horizontal position, which gives a point of rest to these organs in their receptacles, may, up to a certain point, diminish the effects of seasickness. The effects produced by pitching on variations of weight are similar but of greater intensity, especially at the ends of the vessel, where, on account of its length, the displacements, even with slight pitching, are more considerable and, consequently, the tangential forces are more important.

"It should be added that the hypothesis with which we have started to make this explanation clearer—namely, that the oscillations of rolling and pitching take place about a fixed point—does not accord exactly with reality. There is, to be sure, a point in whose neighborhood oscillation is very slight; but experience and calculation both show that in the movement of a vessel there is no point that is absolutely still."—Literary Digest.

MAUTS CAMPAIGN MEETING.

The ox and the ass met in council at the skating rink on Saturday night with a Home Rule audience as a jury, and of course they made "great hits."

With Coke, Richardson and Ashford enunciating Jeffersonian principles the profane Kekipi urging the claims of Jehovah, Jesus Christ and the Holy Ghost for a legislative ticket, and the straight Home Rule speakers clamoring for more lady dog legislation, the result was a variegated production. Kekipi received the most "kokua" "hiki noa" and "pololei," so he was presumably the star speaker of the evening. Poor Tom Clark, from the rear of the hall, tried to say a good word for Lauka, but as on as the audience caught his drift they yelled and stamped him into meek silence. But like all things else, the meeting finally came to an end, and the ox and the ass meditatively strolled away, chewing their respective cud and switching their respective tails, to await results at the polls.—Maui News.

Commissioner Ware has hung this sign "The Lord Hates a Liar" in the Pension Office. Applicants for pensions might supplement the sign with one reading "The Lord Loveth a Cheerful Giver."—The Chicago Evening Post.
